2017 Special Programs and Grants

We have now moved one step further into the digital age. We have joined other agencies, using LexisNexis, a web based software for our traffic crash report system. This will allow officers to render aid, complete their on-scene traffic crash investigation, then complete the crash report electronically later. This will save officers, and those involved, valuable time waiting around the scene for a report to be completed. Officers will also use Bing maps for accurate accident scene mapping as well as other enhanced features for reporting.

Those involved in the accident will get information on how to get a copy of their report online.

"This new system is free for our agency to use, so there are no tax dollars involved in switching over. Again, this will clear up crash scenes and get our officers back on the streets quicker after the investigation. This will also save motorist(s) from waiting an extended period on scene which is important during inclement weather." - Chief Darin DeHaan
